Announcement

The Inaugural Conference of the United States Society for Ecological Economics
USSEE

July 11th–13th, 2001
Duluth, Minnesota

The USSEE is the most recent Regional Chapter of the International Society for Ecological Economics (ISEE). Ecological Economics is an interdisciplinary field of study aimed at the design and implementation of socially and ecologically sustainable economic development. Conference themes will be the social and ecological dimensions of a sustainable and just global economy. This event will showcase the work of over 200 ecological economists representing academia, government agencies, non-profits and the business community.

Plenary Speakers:

Presentation abstracts are due by May 1st, 2001. Organizational display tables are also available at no additional cost for any interested registered participant. Registration $150, $60 for students and non-profits.

Please see www.ussee.org for more information